EDINBURGH

Do you live in Edinburgh, East, Mid or West Lothian?

Do you have an interest in health research?

Come and join our friendly Patient and Public Involvement Advisory Group based at the Edinburgh Clinical Research Facility and help support researchers across NHS Lothian

Background

The Patient Public Involvement Advisory Group is a group of everyday people who have experience of living with health conditions or of supporting family members with health conditions. The experiences you bring are very useful to researchers who don't always understand what it is like to be you or haven't had the experiences you've had.

The group supports researchers by making sure they take the patients views and experiences into account when designing and carrying out research.

Your role

You just need to be enthusiastic and willing to give some time to meet in person (if you can) or to review documents via e-mail. We will provide support and don't expect you to have clinical knowledge or be a scientist. Travel expenses will be paid and there will be opportunities to attend conferences and take part in celebration events.
